

Krul S., Doctor of Law, advocate, Senior lecturer in criminal law Prikarpatsky Law Institute University. Stefanik

THE INFORMATIVE REFERENCE SYSTEMS AS PART OF INFORMATION AND HELP ENSURE THE INVESTIGATION OF CRIMES

Over the past decade the world is in the process of information society, and therefore increasingly developing modern information technology implemented in the field of criminal justice. Information has been crucial in many areas of public life. This information today is the product of research and creative activity, a necessary component in the course of scientific. There is a growing need for mass structuring, storage, retrieval processing and transmitting information of these needs is the purpose of the creation and development of information systems, networks and technologies. In an effort use computing resources and information centers (libraries, programs, forensic accounting) there need its inclusion in the global information networks.

One of the main functions of the police international organizations (Interpol, Europol, etc.) is to coordinate law enforcement states within their structure, organization of exchange of information that can be useful when investigating transnational crimes and finding criminals can hide in other countries and implementation of accounting and analytical work aimed at creating conditions for solving crimes and wanted criminals in this category.

This article examines the informative reference systems in the investigation of crimes as part of information, help ensure the investigation of crimes, and asked to use the informative reference systems in such investigations.

Keywords: information and resources support, information and referral systems, a data bank of information bank.